

UK-INDIA UNIVERSITIES COLLABORATE ON STEM

Campuses of nine UK varsities in India soon

FE BUREAU
New Delhi, October 9

IN A MAJOR push to strengthen India-UK educational collaboration, Prime Minister Narendra Modi and UK Prime Minister Keir Starmer today announced that nine British universities will establish campuses in India. The announcement was made at the CEO Summit in Mumbai, with the University of Southampton already operational in Gurugram, welcoming its first batch of students.

KEIR STARMER, UK PRIME MINISTER
The expansion would strengthen ties between India, UK while pumping millions back into our economy and supporting jobs at home

BRIDGET PHILLIPSON, EDUCATION SECRETARY, UK
These campuses are a marker of our ambition: building long-term partnerships that deliver growth, innovation for both countries

The expansion aligns with India's National Education Policy (NEP) 2020 and aims to offer Indian students access to world-class UK education without leaving the country. The campuses will also foster joint research initiatives and partnerships between academia and industry, driving innovation and skill development across key sectors.

UK's Education Secretary Bridget Phillipson described the move as "a marker of our ambition" under the UK's International Education Strategy, building long-term partnerships to deliver growth, innovation, and opportunities for both nations.

Southampton, Bristol, Surrey, Lancaster, and York, are expanding their footprint in India by setting up branch campuses. The announcement was made by Prime Minister Narendra Modi and UK Prime Minister Keir Starmer at the CEO Summit in Mumbai. The initiative will allow Indian students to earn UK degrees locally while fostering research collaboration and partnerships between academia and industry. The campuses will initially focus on emerging fields such as artificial intelligence, cybersecurity, finance, and biotechnology. This move aligns with India's National Education Policy 2020 and strengthens long-term India-UK educational and economic ties.

Prime Minister Modi said, "The largest and most influential delegation from the education sector has accompanied Prime Minister Starmer. It is a matter of great joy that nine UK universities are now opening campuses in India."

University leaders emphasised the transformative potential of the initiative. Professor Andrew Atherton of Southampton University called it a "flagship initiative" strengthening UK-India links, while Professor Stephen Jarvis of Surrey described the new campuses as a "powerful skills and research accelerator." Professor Simon Guy of Lancaster said the Bengaluru campus would help "spark growth, generate opportunity, and empower students to make a difference in India and globally."

By enabling Indian students to access UK-quality education at home, the UK enhances its global influence and soft power without adding pressure to domestic migration figures.

The University of Bristol will launch its Enterprise Campus in Mumbai in 2026, while the University of Surrey will open a campus in Gujarat's GIFT City in 2026-27, initially offering programmes in artificial intelligence, finance, and cybersecurity. Lancaster University plans to set up a campus in Bengaluru, promoting collaboration with Indian businesses and local universities.

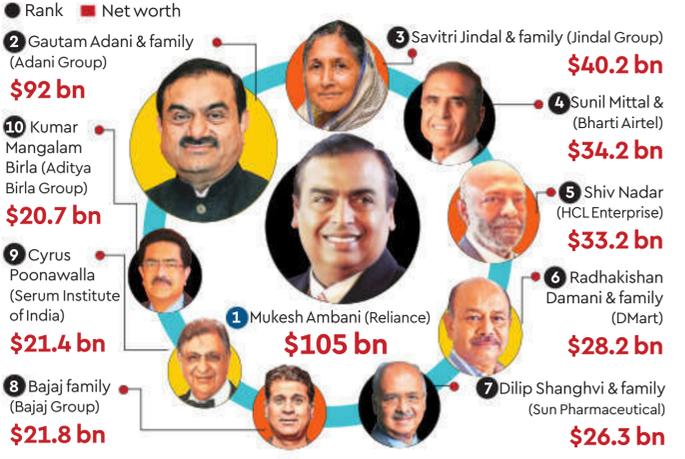

The nine-campus initiative is expected to deepen bilateral ties, enhance research collaboration in areas such as AI, biotechnology, and cybersecurity, and position India as a hub for global higher education partnerships. Nine leading UK universities, including British Council research shows that students who experience UK education retain positive views of the UK for decades.

UK Prime Minister Starmer highlighted the global appeal of British universities, stating that the expansion would "strengthen ties between our two countries while pumping millions back into our economy and supporting jobs at home."

MUKESH AMBANI, CHAIRMAN of Reliance Industries, has retained the top spot in Forbes' list of India's 100 richest. The combined wealth of those on the list fell 9% to $1 trillion. The 2025 list saw three new billionaires, with Sunil Mittal emerging as the biggest dollar gainer, while Ambani's fortunes declined amid market headwinds. Here are the top 10 Indian billionaires:

Hungarian writer Krasznahorkai wins Nobel

NOBEL PRIZE '25 LITERATURE
JUSTYNA PAWLAK & JOHAN AHLANDER Stockholm, October 9

HUNGARIAN WRITER LASZLO Krasznahorkai won the 2025 Nobel Prize in Literature on Thursday "for his compelling and visionary oeuvre that, in the midst of apocalyptic terror, reaffirms the power of art." "Laszlo Krasznahorkai is a great epic writer in the Central European tradition that extends through Kafka to Thomas Bernhard, and is characterised by absurdism and grotesque excess," the Swedish Academy, which awards the prize worth $11 million Swedish crowns ($1.2 million), said in a statement. "But there are more strings to his bow, and he also looks to the East in adopting a more contemplative, finely calibrated tone." Speaking to Swedish Radio, Krasznahorkai said he had only planned to write one book, but after reading his debut novel, "Satantango", he wanted to improve his writing with another one. "My life is a permanent correction," he said.

Laszlo Krasznahorkai is the second Hungarian to win the Nobel Prize in Literature, after Imre Kertesz in 2002

The settings of his novels move across central Europe's remote villages and towns, from Hungary to Germany, before skipping to the Far East, where his travels to China and Japan left deep-seated impressions on Krasznahorkai. The American critic Susan Sontag crowned him contemporary literature's "master of the apocalypse", the Academy said, "a judgement she arrived at after having read the author's second book Melancholy of Resistance." The second Hungarian to win the prize, after Imre Kertesz in 2002, Krasznahorkai was born in the small town of Gyula in southeast Hungary, near the Romanian border. "Satantango", his 1985 breakthrough, is set in a similarly remote rural area and became a literary sensation in Hungary. "The novel portrays, in powerfully suggestive terms, a destitute group of residents on an abandoned collective farm in the Hungarian countryside just before the fall of communism," the Academy said. Across the region, collective farms had been set up when farming land was confiscated at the start of communist rule, and many had become symbols of mismanagement and poverty by the time it ended in 1989. "Everyone in the novel is waiting for a miracle to happen, a hope that is from the very outset punctured by the book's introductory (Franz) Kafka motto: 'In that case, I'll miss the thing by waiting for it,'" the Academy said. Krasznahorkai has repeatedly referenced "The Castle" by Kafka as a key influence. "When I am not reading Kafka, I am thinking about Kafka. When I am not thinking about Kafka, I miss thinking about him," he told the White Review in 2013. A fierce critic of Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orban, Krasznahorkai has said his government was a "psychiatric case" because of its stance on the Ukraine war. Orban opposes military aid to Kyiv and says Hungary should stay out of the war. "How can a country be neutral when the Russians invade a neighboring country?" Krasznahorkai said in an interview with the Yale Review in February. Reacting to the news, Orban wrote in a short message on X: "Laszlo Krasznahorkai, Hungary's Nobel Prize laureate in literature, brings pride to our nation. Congratulations!" Much of Krasznahorkai's inspiration comes from experiences in central Europe on the cusp of the fall of communism. —REUTERS
